

YOUTH, INNOVATION & LEADERSHIP AUSTRALIA'S FUTURE

The chief executive of Australia's largest network of independent agents, First National Real Estate, says his network's sponsorship of youth, innovation and leadership has delivered recognition and support to some of Australia's finest young achievers over the past five years.

'First National Real Estate is known for the community spirit amongst its membership and our members underline that through their sponsorship of the Young Achievers Awards' said Mr Ellis.

'As a result of this commitment, we've been able to assist young Australian's as they work to help young women become future leaders, help the cause of suicide prevention, support animal rights, promote tolerance, support young people with degenerative diseases or serious brain and spinal injuries, connect women with legal advice and business coaching, reduce homelessness and alleviate poverty.

'Young leaders in our communities are doing such incredibly good work and we are proud to bring recognition to their initiatives, so other young people can be inspired to give a little more to their friends, families and communities in whatever way they can.'

One of the examples of the life changing impacts of our young achievers is the winner of the 2016 First National Real Estate Leadership Award, Sheree Rubinstein – 28 of St Kilda. Ms Rubinstein founded the Y-House Foundation in 2010 with the goal of establishing support and options for young people forced to live in, or at risk of entering care, as a result of
